Thank you for giving the gift of Goats and Quackers

When a family lives on only what they can grow, that's called subsisting. Subsisting is not really the same thing as living: it's not an abundant life of enough resources, resilience, and possibility. God wants His children around the world to live abundantly and World Renew's ministry is helping to make that happen.

Your gift of five ducks and two goats can make abundance a possibility for someone who is simply subsisting. Animals boost a family's nutrition and, with proper care, produce offspring that add to the family's income. With better health and income that provides things like medicine, school fees, or building materials, families can move beyond subsistence to wellness and even thriving.

In Kenya, drought and fewer grazing lands left Mrs. Wangui Kinna unable to keep her cow alive, and she wondered how she would care for her family. She readily accepted a goat from World Renew and was trained in how to care for it, delighted by how much less water and active forage it needed. The goat's nutritious milk and twice-yearly kiddings make it an excellent alternative income source for Mrs. Kinna. Plus, her reduced workload has allowed her better health and time for her family.

In Bangladesh, Akhil Biswas invested all he had in a duck farm, but when the ducks started dying he didn't know why and had no one to ask. As a result, his wife had to find work, his son dropped out of school, and Akhil wrestled with despair. When he heard about an opportunity to get the training he lacked through World Renew, Akhil eagerly joined the agricultural program and learned how to care for ducks, diagnose disease, and vaccinate a flock. He received a loan to invest in more ducks, this time armed with knowledge that could help him succeed. Akhil has since paid back his loan, reinvested his profits, and is a successful farmer of 600 ducks!

World Renew wants brothers and sisters like Mrs. Kinna and Mr. Biswas to experience wholeness, wellness, and transformation. Your gift helps make abundance like this possible.

THANK YOU
