Who is World Renew?

World Renew is a faith-based international development and humanitarian organization, working since 1962 to address the root causes and impacts of poverty, disaster, and injustice. With a USD $45.6 million budget in 2023, we work with 67 local partners and have a long-term presence in 19 countries throughout Africa, Asia, and the Americas, bringing permanent, sustainable change to vulnerable communities and working towards the Sustainable Development Goals. We provide consultation, technical assistance, and financial support to strengthen the capacity of our partners as they implement programs that integrate agriculture and food security, health, economic opportunities, peacebuilding and justice, disaster response and preparedness, and gender equality. As an industry leader in prioritizing local ownership of programs, World Renew uses participatory learning and action (PLA) methodologies so communities can identify challenges, evaluate assets, and generate their own solutions.

Our Peacebuilding and Justice Work

World Renew mobilizes communities to identify, confront, and change unjust systems using participatory methods, enabling them to advocate for and work to create change. We focus on ensuring equal rights and opportunities, recognizing that injustice is often due to individual or systemic abuses of power, and that peaceful and just environments enable effective community development. Community peacebuilding addresses conflicts between groups or advocates for formal reform at the legal and institutional level, involving key community leaders in conflict resolution discussions. Integrated programs effectively respond to injustices such as child, early, and forced marriages (CEFM), forced displacement, political instability, environmental degradation, land rights infringements, economic inequalities, gender inequality, gender-based violence (GBV) and discrimination of vulnerable groups.

Key Programming Approaches

- Integrating Justice: Justice is integrated in all sectors so that even in food security, livelihoods, health, or disaster response program, justice is promoted.
- Access and Inclusion: We improve access to and control over resources and systems such as land, financial institutions, and education, especially for women, girls, and people with disabilities. We remove or reduce barriers to participation in community activities, and shift norms, exclusions, or harmful practices such as CEFM, female genital cutting, son preference, and honor violence.
- Protection and Resilience: Through a gender lens, we work to prevent or end GBV, conflict, and abuse (physical, sexual, mental, coercion). We build resilience in the face of injustice and provide trauma healing to survivors of injustice.

- Power and Agency: We aim to increase control over material, human, intellectual and financial resources, as well as enhance the decision making, networking and voices of marginalized groups. Promoting advocacy with communities for the creation, improvement, or enforcement of policies, laws or behaviors helps promote local good governance.

Our Peacebuilding and Justice Expertise

World Renew intervenes in peacebuilding and justice initiatives using its expertise at local, regional, and international levels through networks and alliances such as ACT, Integral, and the Micah Challenge. Using our niche as a faith-based organization and adhering to the Core Humanitarian Standards, our robust and effective initiatives serve as catalysts for transformational development. For example, peacebuilding processes facilitated by World Renew in Nigeria have resulted in a significant Takum peace accord in 2002 and a Jalingo peace accord in 2003, paving ways for subsequent agricultural, livelihoods strengthening, educational, and other development initiatives in the affected areas. We've shared peacebuilding successes in a presentation on Moro Moro peacebuilding work in Indonesia at a 2013 conference through Columbia University's Earth Institute. A USD $1.5 million, 10-year, private estate gift has funded justice programming in 11 countries, allowing us to pilot and scale critical justice initiatives.

Evidence of Impact

World Renew is implementing a USD $553,000 Rohingya disaster response project (2022-2024) funded by Tearfund Switzerland in Bangladesh alongside our local partner SATHI which has reached 2,800 people. In addition to supporting food security, health, nutrition, and water and sanitation, this project includes peacebuilding by promoting peaceful coexistence and mutual trust between host communities and Rohingya refugees. Working through People's Institutions (PI), which are a 3-tiered community organizing structure which promotes participation and ownership of members to impact decisions and resources and services in their communities. Events were hosted with both communities using drama to promote peace, unity and understanding, and 55 groups (35 Primary Groups and 20 Youth Groups in the PI structure) were trained on peacebuilding. By Year 2 of the 3-year project, 18.58% of households report improved understanding on the importance of safety and peace to live alongside Rohingya, up from a baseline of 12%, with more improvement anticipated in the year ahead.

Best Practices and Innovations

- Peacebuilding & Trauma Healing: We support survivors of injustice to work through their trauma alongside each other and enable peacebuilding, including those in camps for refugees or internally displaced people, GBV survivors or conflict and people with disabilities. This psychosocial support reduces symptoms, strengthens interpersonal connections, peace and community resilience, and breaks the cycle of violence. In Mali, 786 people listened to trauma healing radio programs in four languages, while in Nigeria, 105 trained leaders led 1,457 people in healing cycles. In India, the Malto and Santhal tribes who have lived in conflict for hundreds of years saw relationships improve after attending workshops to discuss prejudice, joint cultural events, and conducting 10 collaborative development projects.
- Climate Change and Environmental Justice: Advocacy in Niger and Mali resulted in building collaboration between government officials and communities to protect forest resources. World Renew is leading a Climate Witness Project, which supports individuals and organizations that promote energy stewardship to decrease reliance on fossil fuels, improve climate change education, and advocate for public policy supporting those most impacted by climate change.
- Land Advocacy: Advocacy against land grabbing in Mali included mobilizing U.S. constituents in approaching their members of Congress, resulting in a $250 million U.S. Millennium Challenge irrigation project which distributed ownership of 5 hectares of land to each affected family in 30 Malian villages. In a project in Tanzania, women subsistence farmers are equipped to acquire land title deeds, which help participants make long-term investments in their farms to enhance food security.
- Youth Advocacy: World Renew forms and supports youth action groups, which enable youth in communities to influence community attitudes on key issues affecting them, such as CEFM and GBV, through mediums such as street theater productions.
